

<<Back

COLLEGE STATION Local museum in need of funding

Posted: March 22, 2009 10:28 PM CDT

Updated: March 23, 2009 10:54 AM CDT

by Laura Avila

COLLEGE STATION - The museum of the American G.I. is trying to set roots in the Brazos Valley.

Organizers of the museum have been working for years to have a museum built in college station and they're getting one step closer.

The museum is currently a collection of war artifacts located on 40 acres of land just south of College Station on Highway 6. Brent Mullins, who established the museum, said his vision is to have a standing museum in College Station.

"We're trying to build funds to build our permanent location here. This is our 10th annual open house. We've got the largest collection of World war II Army Vehicles in the South," he said.

But, the non-profit organization is still in need of funding to make its plan possible.

If you would like to donate to the Museum of the American G.I., go to www.magicstx.org

All content © Copyright 2000 - 2009 WorldNow and KRHD. All Rights Reserved.
For more information on this site, please read our Privacy Policy and Terms of Service.

□